Disclaimer and Warning

Survival in the wilderness is inherently risky and dangerous and an aircraft crash can add to the difficulty a survivor experiences. Injuries are a common and ordinary occurrence in a crash or in any wilderness survival situation and the risk of maiming, injury or death in a survival situation is always a possibility, regardless of preparations. The purchase or carriage of a Doug Ritter Aviator Survival Pak or Doug Ritter Aviator Survival Vest cannot assure survival and may not prevent serious injury, maiming or death. Purchaser assumes all risks for use of any equipment or supplies provided or techniques covered in any provided survival instructions.

Some survival equipment, supplies and survival techniques are inherently dangerous and can injure, maim or kill, or damage persons or property, when carried or used, even when used appropriately. Possession or use of some survival equipment and supplies may not be legal in all jurisdictions. It is the purchaser's responsibility to comply with all laws.

The purchaser is informed of the storage life of the components and/or the expiration dates for the components and is responsible for replacing components prior to their expiration. Expiration dates are determined based on information supplied by the manufacturers of the products or generally available information at the time of assembly. Some conditions experienced in an aviation environment, including, but not limited to temperature extremes and pressure changes, may adversely affect the storage life of the components.
